

New technical services manager

Strengthening Lohmann Animal Health's team is Dr Thanakrid Luupanyalerd, who has been appointed technical service and marketing manager for the ASEAN (Association of South East Asian Nations) South Asia and Pacific countries.

Based in Bangkok, he will provide technical back-up for the company's extensive range of poultry vaccines among the region's thriving poultry industries.

After qualifying as a vet at Kasetsart University, Bangkok, Dr Thanakrid gained a PhD in Veterinary Sciences at Nippon Veterinary & Animal Sciences University followed by a MBA, again at Kasetsart University. His career to date has involved lecturing at Mahanakorn University and technical posts with international companies. His expertise in making scientific matters easily understood will be put to good use both in marketing situations and on the farm.

He is fluent in the English, Japanese and Chinese, as well as his native Thai, language.
